Legislature's spending decisions will boost budget 11%

State government's operational budget for fiscal 1977-78, including state aid programs, will be approximately 11% higher than the current

The Legislature's final day decision to approve a $20 million hike in school aid over Gov. J. James Exon's objections raised what had been about a 61/2% increase in spending to the 11%

The result is likely to be a boost in the state sales tax rate from 3% to 3½% effective July 1 to fund the spending increase. No adjustment in the current 17% personal income tax rate is considered likely as a result of legislative spending.

Operational budget recommendations which emerged from the Unicameral's Appropriations those constructed by the governor.

The big increases were added on the floor of the Legislature in the form of school aid and increased maximum payments for aid to dependent

The largest other floor increase, a million dollar funding allotment for alcoholism treat-ment, will be offset by a corresponding hike in beer and liquor taxes.

After three straight years in which its budget leaped by more than 20%, the state's largest consumer of general fund money, the University of Nebraska, had to settle for a budget hike of about

Other major state agencies were also held well below double digit figures - except for the fact that the school aid increase is budgeted through the Department of Education.
Two-thirds of the total budget increase came in the form of two state aid programs.

In addition to the $20 million boost in school aid, replacement funding funneled to local government to offset tax relief for farm and business property was increased by $13 million.

That $33 million in increased state payments to local governmental units is 67% of the estimated $49.2 million in increased tax support for state government operations in the coming fiscal

In rough terms, still subject to final adjustment, the Legislature agreed to about $495.5 million in operational expenditures (including state aid programs) compared to about $446.3 million for fiscal 1976-77.

The $446.3 million figure includes about $7.6 million in deficiency appropriations added to the 1976-77 budget by the 1977 Legislature.

Thus, total spending approved by the 1977 session actually exceeded $500 million.

What should be included as "deficiency" appropriations is subject to interpretation.

The $7.6 million figure includes $2.8 million in specific deficiency appropriation bills plus $2.5 million to meet earlier school aid obligations and $1.7 million to make reimbursements for an old unconstitutional property tax mill levy for technical community colleges.

Whether funding for those past obligations should be considered as part of the current or coming year's budget is an open question. If they are figured in with the budget for fiscal 1977-78, state government's operational budget increase would be closer to 13% than 11%.

The university, usually the subject of a major budget brawl, received a general fund appropriation of about $101 million compared to $94.6 million for the current year.

Campus comparisons are difficult because of some changes in budget programs from the current fiscal year. Each year, different amounts of campus funds are funneled through the central system budget.

This year's allotments (general fund only) include $46.2 million to the Lincoln campuses, $24.2 million to the Medical Center at Omaha and $9.9 million to the University of Nebraska at Omaha. Another $20.6 million is funneled into or through the central systems budget.

Soviet citizen's duty is to state

Union released its longpromised replacement for the 1936 "Stalin constitution" Saturday - a new document that has the personal stamp of Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and savs every citizen must serve the state.

stitution - which needs only the formality of Supreme Soviet approval — covers more than three pages of the Communist party newspaper Pravda. It includes a lengthy list of civil rights for citizens but says they must not be exercised in a way that could harm "the interests of society or the

Some knowledgeable observers here said the new constitution also may provide a tailor-made opportunity for Brezhnev to take over the presidency of the Soviet Union.

The current president, Nikolai V. Podgorny, was ousted from the Communist party's ruling Politburo May 24 and is expected to lose the presidency soon.

Besides the current posts of president and 15 vice presidents, the constitution would create a new post of first deputy president

The new constitution also focuses more on the Communist party than did the 1936 document, which gave the party only a 58-word mention.

It includes lavish praise for directing force of Soviet society." Although the party has always fully controlled the government, the new constitution's wording makes it appear even more appropriate now that the party leader should also be head of state.

Adoption of this constitution by the Supreme Soviet - the country's highest legislative body - is expected in October on the 60th anniversary of the 1917 Bolshevik revolution.

It contains a series of minor modifications in government hard. structure and operations, including eligibility for membership in parliament at age 18, instead of 23 or 21, a hint of more central control over the economy and new flexibility in the roles of.

All passengers, crew saved Halifax, Canada (AP) - An icebreaker and helicopters Friday rescued all 128 passengers and crew members of an 8,300-ton ferry that smashed into an iceberg and sank in the frigid waters off Labrador, shipping officials reported. The ship, the Canadian National icebreaking ferry William Carson, went down at about midnight Thursday, about three hours after the iceberg tore a gaping hole in its bow. The car-and-passenger ferry was on its maiden voyage of the season, plying a 500-mile coastal route from St. John's, Newfoundland, to

Goose Bay in Labrador, which is part of Newfoundland province. The passengers and crew abandoned the sinking ship in lifeboats and many were waiting on nearby ice floes when rescue helicopters and the icebreaker Sir Humphrey Gilbert arrived to pick them up. The rescue craft took them to St. John's and St. Anthony, Newfoundland.

The ship sank near Square Island just north of the strait of Belle Isle, about 18 miles off the Labrador coast

The Carson left St. John's at 6 p.m. Tuesday and made stops at Lewisporte and St. Anthony The ship plowed into the iceberg off Mary's Harbor at about 9:30 p.m. and radioed back to St. Anthony's: "Hole in bow and taking on water fast. Within three hours, witnesses said, the Carson's bow dipped under, the stern rose straight in the air and the ship slipped below the surface.

Workers reject city pact

Members of Lincoln's largest government employes' union Friday night rejected the city's 6% wage increase offer by a 3-to-1 margin, said Harriet Glover, union presi-

The 6% wage increase does not match inflation, she said. The union sought a 50-cent-an-hour increase for all employes, rather than a percentage increase, which she termed unfair to low-paid workers.

The city-offered package lacks several desired fringe benefits, she said, including a 10-cent-an-hour pay differential for persons working rotating shifts, and an additional week of vacation for workers employed more than 15 years.

House limits Energy Dept. to 5 years

Friday to establish a new department of energy but insisted that the agency should only have a life of five years unless renewed by Congress.

The energy department bill, slightly trimmed from that requested by President Carter, was approved 310 to 20.

.Similar legislation has already passed the Senate. Before the bill can go to the President's desk, a House-Senate conference committee must reconcile differences between the two

Both measures would pull together energy programs now scattered throughout the government and abolish three existing agencies outright.

And both measures reject Carter's proposal that the secretary of the new agency - expected to be White House energy adviser James R. Schlesinger be given broad powers to set prices to vest these powers in a commission to be included in the new department.

Carter has asked Congress to create the new department to carry out the energy proposals he wants enacted.

On a 202-126 vote, the House approved an amendment by Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., that would kill the new agency on Dec. 31, 1982. This would require further congressional action then if the department is to be con-

Although sponsors of the bill protested it would lead to inefficiency in the new department by creating an atmosphere of uncertainty, Broyhill argued that "Congress does a very good job setting up new agencies but a poor job at reviewing them.

He said if Congress determines that the energy department is doing a good job, then it can vote to extend it beyond

Before approving the bill, the House rejected a proposal to include within the new agency a unit empowered to strip large oil companies of their authority to buy foreign oil directly.

Under the House bill, a five-member commission would regulate prices of natural gas and wholesale rates of electricity transmitted across state lines, responsibilities now vested in the Federal Power Commission.

The Senate-passed bill would establish a three-member board which, along with natural gas and wholesale electricity rates, would also regulate some oil prices. But the Senate version permits input from the energy secretary and gives the President veto power over the commission's decisions a power not contained in the House

This is a key difference that will have to be resolved by the House-Senate conference committee.

The House version also gives Congress the right to veto rules issued by the new department. The Senate bill does not.

After the House vote, Schlesinger said the administration will push for enactment of the Senate version of the bill, which gives the President and the energy secretary more power than the House measure does.

The new agency, the first Cabinet department to be created since the Department of Transportation in 1966, would absorb programs from the FPC, the Federal Energy Administration and the Energy Research and Development Administration, all of which would be abolished.

It would also pick up energy programs from a half dozen other government agencies.

Nation's economy healthier

economic health improved in May, when un- nual rate of 6.5% employment dipped to 6.9% and inflation eased substantially in the wholesale market, the Labor Department reported Friday.

Wholesale prices rose a moderate 0.4%, ending a strong three-month inflationary surge caused by escalating farm and food prices. Coffee and other farm prices fell in May for the first time in six months

- Unemployment dipped below 7% for the first time since the early days of the recession 30 months ago, although the actual drop was insignificant

"I think the trends are very good," said Julius Shiskin, chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "I'd say our recovery is as good or better as the recovery we experienced in 1967-

Administration economists interpreted May's 2.3% decline in farm prices — the first in six months — as a first sign that grocery prices will be easing in the next few months. Wholesale trends affect retail markets.

"It certainly is a break in the trend, remarked a government economist. "But it doesn't mean consumers can expect lower grocery store prices just yet.

President Carter's economic advisers have predicted that inflation will continue at an accelerated rate in the retail markets through to 6.6% for women

The tiny wholesale price rise in May compared to big jumps averaging 1% in each of the previous three months. May also brought moderate increases of 0.4% for industrial goods and 1.8% for processed foods.

Farm price declines offset increases for fuel and power. Raw coffee prices, which have nearly tripled in the past year, suddenly dropped in May along with grains, eggs, cocoa beans, tea, soybeans, poultry and vegetables.

The wholesale price index was 195.2 in May, up 7.3% over the past year. This means that goods costing $100 in 1967 now cost $195.20 or nearly double over the past decade. Unemployment fell from 7% in April to the lowest level since November 1974. But the actual number of jobless Americans remained virtually unchanged from the April level of 6.75 million

Carter's advisers warn that joblessness may not decline much more this year. Some economists even foresee a small temporary increase during the summer months.

Total employment rose for the seventh consecutive month in May, climbing 400,000 to 90.4 million. The proportion of Americans in the labor market rose to a record 62.2%.

Factory hiring increased 65,000 in May. Joblessness rose to 5.3% for men, and declined

U.S., Cuba to swap diplomats

Washington (AP) - The United States and Cuba moved Friday to end 16 years of official hostility by swapping diplomatic teams that will take up problems standing in the way of full restoration of relations.

The names of those released, all being held on drug charges, were withheld until their families were notified.

The State Department called the announcement a goodwill gesture but said it "was not part of the deal" to establish diplomatic 'interest sections."

The Lincoln Star Gasohol comments prompt responses

By Lynn Zerschling

An official of the Nebraska Petroleum Council responded Friday to Gov. J. James Exon's statement that oil companies may be misrepresenting his position on the gasohol program. Charles Chace, executive director of the council, said the petroleum industry's policy on Nebraska's gasohol program has remained unchanged.

He said the industry doesn't oppose building a grain alcohol plant if it will relieve the over-supply of farm grains. However, the industry doesn't support 'mandating the use of ethanol or the byproducts before the plant is built." After the plant is built and grain alcohol is produced the industry does not object to it being used as a blend in gasoline if the price is reasonable.

Chace pointed out that oil companies, associations and officials in the industry are not forced to accept the Petroleum

Council's policy. The Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation also issued a statement Friday that its policy has remained the same. The Farm Bureau Federation believes there are "many unanswered questions" about producing gasohol.

"In view of the current situation, we

We may throw out baby with the bath water

In some respects it was a curious article on water conservation by William Safire of the New York Times that appeared on this page yesterday. It concerned the drought in northern California and what the future holds by way of enlightened water conservation.

Part of Safire's reasoning contained some validity - that our promotion of water usage in irrigation is contributing to the current water shortage. That is true in all aspects of our life. As a nation, we have treated water as a cheap and inexhaustible resource when, in fact, it is

But in our haste now to rectify this error, we often seem to be running in all directions at once. Safire, for instance, noted that in California "part of the problem is the weather: The sun keeps shining. This is the second year of the drought, of exposed cracked-earth bottoms where reservoirs used to sparkle, and Californians are getting edgy.

One might conclude from the statement that a dry reservoir is, therefore, a problem. If so, a full reservoir is something else. An asset, perhaps?

But then, Safire goes on to suggest that perhaps our building of such things as reservoirs is a mistake because it breeds a consumption of water that gives us a shortage problem in times of inadequate rainfall. But is that an accurate conclusion?

Reservoirs came into popularity as conservation measures and we see nothing yet that has destroyed that premise. The point to remember in considering reservoirs or dams is that they contain water that would otherwise be

Without a reservoir, the water would flow on down the stream and eventually reach the ocean, where it becomes salty and unfit for human use. Certainly, reservoirs can have an adverse effect upon underground water supplies downstream but not if they are properly managed

Also true is the fact that reservoir construction can adversely disrupt the environment of the stream itself of which they become a part and of the surrounding stream drainage area. But that is a distinct consideration in each and every water storage proposal or project, not an inherent fact of every reservoir.

Our purpose here is not to promote the cause of each and every big dam project now in existence or on the drawing boards, but rather, to urge a word of caution in our water planning for the future. One of the biggest mistakes we could make would be to pronounce a wholesale death sentence on all future reservoirs.

A reservoir stores otherwise lost water for productive use at a later date. That ought to continue to be an integral part of our future water conservation

Not reservoirs done thoughtlessly, but stream storage where conditions dictate the sensibility of it from all environmental points of view. It is simply bad and faulty logic to say that since we now have problems in California with dry reservoirs, we can solve the problem in the future by not building any more reservoirs

That's akin to saying that if we needed no water, we would have no problem. The fact is that without any reservoirs at all, northern California would still be having severe water problems.

A further fact is that, without the reservoirs, the problem in California would have come a lot sooner than it did and would then and now be far more severe than it is.

We need co-ordination of water storage dams with our environment and we need better co-ordination of all methods of irrigation with natural and man-made water supplies but it makes no sense at all to suddenly throw out all the conservation practices of the past because we have frequently let demand outstrip supply. Let us intelligently eliminate those practices that now are shown to be wrong and that utilization which has made the wisdom of the past

London - Amid the pomp and circumstance that only the British seem able to muster, even in these straitened times, Queen Elizabeth II is being acclaimed in a year-long Silver Jubilee. Hundreds of bonfires will be lit all over the country on the night of June 6 to commemorate the 25th anniversary of her reign. The following day at St. Paul's Cathedral there will be a Thanksgiving Service.

that "We are fortunate that, in Queen Elizabeth, (the throne) is . . . in the hands of someone for whom the nation feels genuine affection and admiration." The monarchy, as an institution, may have its critics, but the Queen personally has almost none. As The Observer pointed out, the Royal Family is expected to embody Christian values and to provide an example of a happy and stable family life. Such a model means a great deal to the British people, even if many of them are unable to pattern their own lives after it.

Britain's reduced circumstances have taken their toll on the jubilee, so

Elizabeth has acquired a wealth of there will be no construction of triumphal arches. Moreover, Elizabeth does not intend to pardon prisoners or reduce railway fares for children. Instead, a writer to The Times mischievously suggested, she might consider granting an amnesty on overdue library books or declaring a moratorium on parking fines.

All in all, a mood of solemn pride prevails. Most Britons would agree with news commentator Brain Connell, who asserted that the nation has a monarch "complete in herself, wise and experienced in our ways and constitutional processes, a woman of honesty and humility, with a strong sense of duty and a firm conviction that what she is doing is thoroughly worthwhile.

A nod to St. E.'s

Lincoln, Neb. I have been muttering and mumbling now for several days about the article by Associated Press Writer C. C Miniclier on Page 14 of The Star for May 25. He was unhappy with his hospital care.

Since he is a trained journalist, could it be that his professional eye fell only on the unusual, the exceptions that justify the "man-bitesdog" dictum of reporters? In case he was trying to write in a jocular vein, however, he succeeded only in coming up with a tasteless article since he makes it appear that hospitals are uncaring and poorly operated.

He should have tried our own St. Elizabeth Community Health Center. There, sir, is a hospital whose staff shows real concern for patients. I should know: I have been there as a patient several times. The faces of staff members in whose charge I was quickly flash to mind - there were many! They are professionals who, when they come on duty, visit each of their patients and in a cheery, sympathetic way are likely to ask: "How are you getting along today? Anything special that you need?" The nurses there have a warm rapport with patients.

I can certainly sympathize with the grumpy Mr. Miniclier about his spinal problem; a back pain would certainly be bad. Anyway, if he needs further care, let him come to Lincoln where we have competent physicians; then let him hie himself out to St. E.'s He Cambridge, Neb. This letter is addressed not just to parents of school-age children nor to fellow educators, but to a community of people who need to be concerned with the education of their future citizens. Because we have chosen teaching as ou profession, we are naturally deeply concerned with the overall quality of the Cambridge educational system. We write to inform people of the problems present in our system, hoping that this will stimulate thought and concern among those who are unaware that our young people are being deprived of a basic right that of receiving the best education possible. The questions that we pose come as a result of our observations and experiences from within the system.

(1) Do you know that we are losing at least seven faculty members this year alone? Because of this turnover, the continuity of educational programs has already suffered greatly, as exemplified by the high school English program. Some teachers have left because they have become disillusioned by a lack of incentive to grow professionally. precipitated by a seeming satisfaction with mediocrity.

(2) Is the administration providing the proper guidance Dark day necessary for establishing a healthy, effectual learning environment?

Upon entering service in the Cambridge public schools, teachers are not provided with specific guidelines as to course content and curriculum policy. An administration MUST clearly define specific goals and expectations so that they may be assured of teacher effectiveness. Currently, teachers are not informed of any expectations until there are complaints from the

(3) Is there a present procedure for evaluation of each and every teacher's performance?

No. Any employe needs to know whether he/she is doing a good job in order to modify and improve his/her performance. The administration (school board inclusive) should not rely upon hearsay from students and parents as the sole means of appraisal of the teacher's execution of his/her duties. Frequent classroom observation by the administration and board could benefit the entire system.

(4) Are the community priorities aimed toward WINDLE REEL preparing our young people for the future?

We believe that the community, perhaps unconsciously, is failing to instill in the voung people a sense of values that will enrich their lives and enable them to cope with the real world.

Even at the elementary level, children perceive that scholastic mediocrity is all participation in sports. In the high school, quality of education is severely threatened by frequent absenteeism of athletes and spectators. The administration seems to plan a classroom schedule around the sports schedule. Sports, a socalled "extra-curricular" activity, is overshadowing what should be our top priority - a complete education.

These problems are not in surmountable. First of all, lines of communication need to be established and kept open among teachers, administrators, school board and community. Second, a system of teacher evaluation and a curriculum outline need to be instituted. The adult community needs to assume the responsibilities of clarifying values and re-establishing priorities. being part of that "Western Civilization" and offered to include the states of that region in its bounty.

All this sounds remote and even vaguely romantic today, until you look at the revival and muddle of nationalism in Europe and elsewhere in the world. The European states have 'recovered" but not reformed all that much. They have made some progress, but they have regained their 'independence'' and don't quite know what to do with it in an increasingly mixed-up and interdependent world. It is interesting to recall one issue that troubled the founders of the Marshall Plan in Washington months before Marshall went to Harvard. The issue was not whether Washington should help Europe recover from the destruction of the war, but whether it should insist on the political reform and massive aid, revive it first and hope for together. political reform later.

William McChesney Martin, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, argued for political reform first. If the European states were restored before they committed themselves to reform and some kind of political unity, they would never reform. In an analogy for which the Europeans never quite forgave him, he said it was the old problem of handling a drunk. If you restored him before he reformed himself, he would go back to his old habits.

Martin's view was rejected, but the civilization. Washington even thought U.S. objective of European unity as the in those days of Eastern Europe as. purpose of the Marshall Plan is clear from the record. Lord Franks recalled the facts in his "Lessons of the Marshall Plan Experience" here in Paris this week.

'The critical element in my view," he said, "was an idea, the idea of unity in Europe, in Western Europe, once Eastern Europe had withdrawn. It was alive in American thinking. It was in the mind of George Kennan as he drafted the report of the policy planning staff for General Marshall: the insistence on a joint program initiated by Europeans, so that they begin to think like Europeans and move towards a larger less-fragmented market."

Lord Franks also recalled that the idea of European unity was alive in the report of the Committee of European Economic Co-operation, which responded to Marshall's offer of aid. The report stated that "the controlling principle of the committee's work has been the interdependence of the national economies of the countries concerned and, if these countries are to proceed quickly along the road to unification of Europe as a condition of recovery, they must proceed

> It is clear that the dreams of 30 years ago have not been realized, that the plan worked so well and restored so much of the old that Europe rejected the dream and America has now almost forgotten it. Yet, despite French insistence on national independence and British tardiness in joining the community, there is still much worth celebrating after 30 years, for the idea of practical co-operation among the nations remains, and the link between Europe and North America has not been broken.

Western Europe, the European Economic Community," Lord Franks

years insisted, "is still dependent upon the United States for its security, and its prosperity is still linked to that of the United States. Many of the younger generation do not wish to accept this as

"Too young to remember the Marshall Plan, their minds are colored by memories of the war in Vietnam and of Watergate. They do not trust America or American foreign policy, but these abberations are only part of

"As in 1947, so in 1977, it is the common interest of the United States and Western Europe that the concern and involvement of the United States in Western Europe and the European Economic Community should con-

In general, this principle of cooperation seems to be accepted in this part of the world - particularly the American security and economic side of the bargain, but the notion of European unity, the original American objective of the Marshall Plan, while not wholly lost, seems to recede from the European mind.

Even Jean Monnet, a Nobel Peace Prize candidate if there ever was one, and the last of the optimistic architects of European unity, watches with regret in his 80's the stubborn power of nationalism and its refusal to recognize the imperative demands of an increasingly new co-operative world

Even so, the Marshall Plan was a step worth celebrating, and the odd thing is that the political leaders of Europe, so preoccupied by the anxieties and complexities of national politics and economics, paid so little attention to the anniversary.

CIA slowly relinquishing press meddling

Washington - Slowly and painfully, the truth comes out.

Back in 1973 we first learned that the CIA used journalists as agents and news organizations as covers. The disclosure came from William Colby, then CIA director, who also said that he would cut back his agency's involvement with the press.

Since then there have been a series of similar revelations and promises of change. Details were different each time, but it was abundantly clear that the CIA was using the press and hated to give it up. As to specifics - the names of journalists who served the agency and news organizations that cooperated - the agency resolutely stonewalled. And the news business, usually so resourceful in digging out secrets, contented itself with pompous resolutions and expressions of dismay.

The other day, however, a tiny piece of the puzzle dropped into place. Richard S. Salant, president of CBS News, disclosed that in the 1950's and early 1960's the network worked closely with the CIA. It let agents monitor films and correspondents' reports that were not used on the air. Foreign correspondents who came home for yearend broadcasts were debriefed by Allen Dulles, CIA boss at the time. Salant also indicated that at least two of the network's employes worked closely with the agency — just how closely is

As is customary in such matters,

Charles B. Seib

there is confusion over the extent and circumstances of the CIA-CBS cooperation. Sig Mickelson, who headed CBS News in the 1950's, said that it was a matter of "sharing information" and that it was done at the implied direction of CBS Board Chairman William S. Paley. A spokesman for Paley says that Paley doesn't remember it that

Both Mickelson and Salant, who says he ended the arrangement, have defended it as a by-product of the cold war. But the CIA's involvement with the news media was not just a cold war phenomenon. It continued into the very recent past. We cannot be entirely sure that it isn't continuing now, abroad if not at home

There is still much to be learned. Other pieces of the puzzle will fall into place, one by one, and eventually we may get a picture of what went on and who was involved.

But what about the present? The best source these days is Sen. Daniel Inouye (D-Hawaii), whose Senate Intelligence Committee appears to be trying to give CIA the close congressional oversight that has been lacking for so many Inouye recently assured members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors that the CIA finally has stopped using American journalists. That honoring a pledge it made more than a year ago. Nevertheless, assuming there are no hidden gimmicks, it is welcome news.

Inouye's report on CIA involvement in foreign journalism was less heartening. He said that he hoped someday he would be able to say that no members of the press, foreign or domestic, were involved in U.S. intelligence activities, "but I am sorry I cannot do so this afternoon. He did report, however, that "certain covert activities involving foreign press" have been ended and that he favored a flat prohibition against such activities. He also indicated that a majority of committee members agreed with him, which raises the strong possibility that Congress will act to end all CIA press involvement, foreign and domestic.

If that happens, and if Congress can make it stick, an embarrassing double standard that has been tolerated by the American news business will end.

While nearly all American journalists would agree that espionage and U.S. journalism should not be mixed, they have been much less disturbed by CIA meddling with foreign media. At the same time, the CIA, while surrendering - ever so slowly - its involvement with the American media, has insisted that it must retain the option of manipulating the press abroad. Now it appears that the agency is merely means that the agency is about to be forced to surrender that option. This is good news for several

First, as long as the CIA feels free to tamper with the foreign press, there is the danger that material it plants will return to this country in dispatches by correspondents unaware that they are peddling tainted merchandise. Second, the CIA involvement with the media here and abroad has hampered American efforts to fight an international movement toward government control of news by making it difficult to refute charges that the American press itself is a tool of government.

There is a third reason for welcoming an end to CIA press involvement that is less selfish, nationally and professionally. In the end it is the most persuasive reason of all:

President Carter has declared America's commitment to human rights. Surely among those rights are political and social freedom. And surely such freedoms can exist only in societies of informed people - that is societies with a free, uncorrupted

So for Americans to profess a belief in human rights and yet tolerate the corruption of the press of other countries by an agency of the U.S. government could be seen, around the world. only as the grossest hypocrisy. And that is what it would be.

Tax Commissioner William Peters says state-level tax rates will go up June 13 when the State Board of Equalization and Assessment meets.

A news release indicated both sales and income tax rates would be affected.

"Mr. Peters said the purpose of the meeting is to raise tax rates as mandated by the enactments of the 85th Legislature, first session, and to make necessary changes caused by the federal Tax Reduction and Simplification Act of 1977," which causes significant changes in the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954." the press release said

Gov. J. James Exon said legislative actions, specifically the $20 million state school aid increase over his veto, would require that the sales tax rate increase from 3% to 3.5% statewide

The wording about the federal income tax and its impact on state-level income tax rates was the first indication from Peters of an imminent income tax hike also. The current rate on state personal income is 17% of the federal income tax liability.

'Good life' rediscovered

Tilton should now be lolling around Palm Springs where he spent the last half of a 30year West Coast career.

Thanks, but no thanks

The famed desert retirement center may be great for the idle rich and the worn-out poor. But for returnee Tilton and his equally enthusiastic wife, Alice, Nebraska is greater.

So the amiable pair settled instead for a five-acre spread just outside Filley which has 'just about everything a person needs except guineas - and we'll be buying some of those." No acreage could be better kept or more appreciated or slower paced.

We pay no attention either to the day or the hour, don't even carry a timepiece," said Tilton, 62. "After all the years on a concrete floor, this old dirt feels so good that the days just aren't long enough."

Somehow Dee's lube shop experience and Alice's 41 years as a registered nurse translate into an amazing rural self-sufficiency. Both beam with pride that "our own ground supplies about everything for the table except salt and

"I'm milking six goats and altogether they don't eat as much in a week as one old cow does in a day," Tilton said. "By fall we should have 50 to 60 fat geese . . . guess the place hasn't done too bad considering it had only a stray cat when we took over two years ago."

Some 370 young cedars, 100 poplars, a small orchard and a lilac windbreak are among the plantings toward "a really nice place we may not live long enough to see." Weeds are absolutely off limits.

"I do hate weeds along a fence, so I keep the ground shaved off all the way around the place," said the proud Gage countian.

Discouraged by land prices in the west, the couple made a quick buy on the acreage "run down even as it was" while in Nebraska on vacation. Dee was originally from Filley but Alice had always lived in "the mad rush of California.

"We saw people come from all over the world to retire in Palm Springs," said the couple, "but if we'd moved into one of those crowded trailer parks, we'd have been crazy

New program to refine irrigation

By Dominick Costello Farm Editor

A University of Nebraska program financed by an $80,000 appropriation from the regents' discretionary fund in 1971 has died almost unnoted.

Dr. Les. Sheffield, head of the irrigation development program, has been transferred to NU's department of agricultural economics, where he will be working with other economists to find ways of making irrigation more efficient. He will hold the title extension management specialist (irrigation).

"It is a natural thing that was due. We have no problem getting people to develop irrigation in Nebraska," Sheffield said. "The problem is getting them to do a better job of managing water and energy while irrigating.'

Dr. Les Sheffield ... shifts jobs.

Martin Massengale. "I have been writing about the economics of irrigation anyway," Sheffield said. "This His day-to-day work won't will give me an opportunity to touch base with other water-related boards and economists who are working organizations. on irrigation.'

One of his goals is to develop an easy-to-use handbook so that farmers can compare their irrigation systems with similar operations in their areas of the state.

"One farmer may be using more water than he needs to use or his pumping cost may be way out of line. He may use more or less fertilizer than he needs," Sheffield said. "If we do this handbook right, he ought to be able to compare his entire operation, his irrigation enterprise, with the

Sheffield will continue to serve as secretary to the Nebraska Water Conference Committee and will represent Dr. Massengale on various Sheffield also expects to work with Dr. James Gilley of the agricultural engineering department on a project that will tell farmers the kinds of economic problems they can anticipate if water use is

"This project will use water meters to try to improve the use of water," Sheffield said. "We will be looking at plant populations, fertilizer use and all the things that go along with irrigation economics."

When the projects have been completed, farmers should be able to predict, with reasonable accuracy, what their yields will be under reduced irrigation resulting from water shortages or high energy costs that force them to use less water.

Beatrice - Charges of robbery, auto theft and using a firearm in commission of a felony were filed Friday against a Blue Springs man in connection with Thursday's robbery of the State Bank of Liberty.

Lance W. Rowe, 21, appeared in Gage County Court and was ordered held for preliminary hearing when he failed to post $35,000 in appearance bonds. Judge Paul Korslund set arraignment for June 7.

Sheriff Fred Steinkamp Jr. said Rowe, originally from Minnesota and married to a local woman, was arrested Thursday night at his home, a few miles from Liberty. He offered no resistance

A pickup truck allegedly stolen and used in the bank robbery was found abandoned Friday nine miles east of Beatrice near Rockford. The truck apparently was one belonging to Liberty resident Frank Wignall, which was reported stolen Thursday, the sheriff said.

No weapon was found, Steinkamp said. Deputy County Atty. Steve Timm said no money that may have been from the $1,800 robbery was recovered when Rowe was arrested, the Associated Press reported.

The incident set Liberty townspeople to reminiscing about the last time the bank was robbed, Oct. 29, 1931. A copy of an old local newspaper dug out by the Ralph Larsens, who own controlling interest in the bank, suggested that professionals had been responsible

But Mrs. Larsen, who was alone in the bank Thursday while her husband was on an errand to Beatrice, said this week's intruder appeared to be inexperienced.

'His voice was shaky, his gun was shaky and I was shaky," she reflected.

She said the bandit appeared to have blackened his fingertips, possibly with some chemical to avoid leaving fingerprints. He had a bandana over his face and his hair was wavy and poofy and looked like a wig.

After having her fill a paper sack with money at gunpoint, the robber fled

97 Nebraskans in expansion of public service

Omaha (AP) - Since President Carter authorized expansion of the public service jobs program earlier this year, 97 Nebraskans have received jobs, the Kansas City office of the U.S. Labor Department announced Friday.

Of those, 52 were employed through Omaha, seven through Lincoln, and 38 in the rest of the state

The office said they were among more than 700 unemployed workers newly hired in a four-state region that also contains Iowa, Kansas and Missouri.

Regional Administrator Richard Miskimins said the goal of the expansion is to double the number of workers in public service jobs by the end of the year, to about 725,000 nationwide.

The hirings brought the number of public service workers in Nebraska to 1,022.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2 and Acts 4:25

In the 18th and following chapters of the Gospel of St. John there is the record of Christ's arrest and followed by His trial, crucifixion, burial, and resurrection. The previous 17th chapter gives His prayer to His Heavenly Father. At the beginning of it He says God has given Him power over all flesh to give out Eternal Life: "AND THIS IS ETERNAL LIFE. THAT THEY MIGHT KNOW THEE, THE ONLY TRUE GOD. AND JESUS CHRIST, WHOM THOU HAST SENT."

"TO KNOW GOD IS ETERNAL LIFE:" The first recorded words spoken by Jesus Christ after His baptism by John Baptist were: "MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE, BUT BY EVERY WORD THAT PROCEEDETH OUT OF THE MOUTH OF GOD." Matthew and Luke 4:4.

Adam was 930 years old when he died. Noah, the tenth from Adam was 950 when he died. All the men in between them lived to be over 900 except two, one of whom died rather early and only to be 777. However, one of these men by-passed the grave and never did die. His name was Enoch. He got to "walking with God" and after a sojourn of only 365 years on this earth he and The Almighty walked off into Eternity where he is still "going strong" in "The land where we never grow old." The man who lived to be the oldest of those recorded was the son of Enoch who died at 969. The next oldest who made it to 962 was the father of Enoch.

The following quote gives us some information as to the cause why God destroyed men in the days of Noah:

"The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted His way upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them: and behold, I will destroy them with the earth." Gen. 6:11-13.

As God looks upon the 20th Century earth does He see any corruption and violence "Look to yourselves!" "Search The Scriptures" and consider the vows you took in joining The Church. "Pay your vows unto God, He has no pleasure in fools." A heathen is one who does not believe in The God of The Bible. Why does he rage? Because he does not like God and His ways of righteousness and holiness. In a generation that corrupts the ways of God on the earth there are none who feel need of and appreciates the work of the risen and living Christ in their hearts more than such as set themselves to literally obey God's Moral Law, His Ten Commandments. To fear The Lord and obey His Commandments is "The whole duty of man." Are you striving to do your duty?

FOREVER AND EVER

This picture was taken just a year ago. It was a perfect afternoon for a garden wedding reception. Joan and Kenny were so much in love

Now, this morning, a letter came in the mail from Joan telling us that she is coming home. She's thinking about divorce — that the beautiful dream that she and Kenny shared has turned into a nightmare.

Naturally, her father and I will welcome her. This is her home and always will be. But this is a problem that we shall not try to solve by ourselves. We will turn, as we know Joan will, to our church, and to the very minister who both baptized and married her. Maybe all of us, working together, will find a way through God's Will and His Word.

The Church comes very close in times of stress. Remember that.

Municipal power pool expects excess in '80s

The Nebraska Municipal Power Pool could wind up with excess power to sell to member cities or other utilities during the early 1980s.

The organization's board of directors was told Thursday that Lincoln, Grand Island and Hastings expect to have varying amounts of excess power to market then.

Representatives of the power interests in those cities were on hand for the meeting and those from Grand Island and Hastings indicated their expected excesses would be from new power plants.

The Grand Island representative indicated a 100megawatt power plant is planned for that city; a Hastings spokesman said that city's plant size is still undetermined, though the smallest would be 54 megawatts.

Regrets strain family

DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: Most of us are in sympathy with the elderly, but doesn't it seem some oldsters feel it is their prerogative (because of age) to be unreasonable, inconsiderate, and exempted from any blame for wrongs they may have done to those who cared about them?

One would think there could never be any regrets for having been kind to one's mother, but it seems this is the position my hubby is now in. His mother has helped others to buy homes without any obligation except to pay back the loan. We are (after 40 years) still in mid-air without the security of a deed, still paying her rent even though she is now in a nursing home. Ours has been the only property she has made a profit from, having received the amount of the original cost several times over plus money received from renting part of the house at various times.

Hubby usually paid for repairs with a promise from her of future repayment, which never materialized. We were led to believe that sooner or later the house would be ours without any ties, so we turned down opportunities to acquire our own home. When she even suspected we were thinking of buying one she became upset and tried very hard to discourage us. We were made to feel unappreciative and so dropped any plans for making a change. We've had some unpleasant experiences with in-law couples who moved in during times of financial stress. So you can see why having the deed in our hands would help us to come down from this feeling of suspension and relax. As we visit Mom regularly at the nursing home, I look around and wonder how many others here are trying to escape from a guilty conscience by withdrawing into another world? She has been 'expecting death' since the early days of our marriage. She once asked me why the Lord is making her "suffer" that way. (She had a stroke.)

I could have thought of dozen reasons, but didn't want to be cruel. I sometimes feel that God will never give her the Finding the best opening lead is often the key to successful defense. If you keep your ears tuned in on the adverse bidding and concentrate on the multiplicity of messages being transmitted back and forth, you may intercept some vital clues that will guide you to the winning lead.

Consider this deal where West found the killing opening against four spades. He led a club and South was now in a position where, whatever he did, he had to go down one. He won the club lead with the jack and led a diamond, hoping West would have the ace and duck. But East won dummy's queen with the ace and returned

South had no quick entry to dummy to discard a heart on the king of diamonds, so he ducked the heart in the hope that East had led away from the king. But West showed up with the king and returned a club. East ruffed, thus scoring the third trick for the defense, and South later lost a trump trick to King Features Syndicate, Inc.

West's opening club lead was well founded. He knew from the bidding that declarer held five spades, since South would not have bid spades twice with only a four-card suit. West realized also that South had at least five clubs for his club bid; with four clubs and five spades he would have opened the bidding with one spade.

West also knew that North had at least four clubs for his jump-raise in clubs, which in turn meant that East had either a singleton or was void in clubs. So West led a club and was well rewarded for paying attention to the bidding and making the only lead to defeat the contract.

Portland holds on to take 3-2 playoff edge

Philadelphia (UPI) — The Portland Trail Blazers had the Philadelphia 76ers offbalance in the first half Friday, but their fast break attack in the third quarter really steam rollered the Sixers in the third quarter.

Spelunking is but one of the outdoors activities that has become increasingly popular during the last 10 years. Backpacking and hiking have enjoyed the sharpest rise. But other more demanding sports, such as rock climbing, have also attracted large numbers. The U.S. Forest Service says between 1960 and 1965, outdoor recreation visits increased from 4.2 billion to 6.5 billion and are expected to increase to about 16.8 billion by the year

What's this man doing? He's one of a growing number of spelunking fans.

"It isn't necessarily fadism," said Roberts, 33, who is also an accomplished Alaskan climber. "I think the popularity will accelerate. Many now see climbing as an alternative to traditional sports such as football."

Who are these people that tromp up mountains with burdensome packs, that climb vertical cliffs or descend hundreds of feet into the ground? What are they searching for? Are they masochists?

'A lot of them are under 30," said Watters of the Sierra Club, who is also a Wells Fargo Bank official. "A lot of youngsters - and older people, too - are looking for something. They want to get away from the values of urban

Brad Schneider of the Mohonk Trust said in comparison with backpacking, the surge in climbing has generally been restricted to college students. The Mohonk Trust owns and operates the Schwangunks in New York, one of the most popular climbing spots in the United States.

"Climbing is almost exclusively a collegiate sport," Schneider said. "Most seem to stick with it for an average of two years and give it up after college. The actual number of climbers over 30 years of age has remained static.

Two NCAA track meet records fall

Larry Doubley of Southern California and Kenyan Samson Kimombwa of Washington State set NCAA track meet records Friday.

Sprinter Harvey Glance of Auburn retained his title in the 100 meters and Scott Nielson of Washington successfully defended his crown in the hammer throw.

Doubley leaped 26-feet, 11 3/4-inches to erase the 26-11 record set in 1975 by Friday's runnerup, Charlton Ehizuelen of Illinois. Ehizuelen was the leader heading into the final round with 26-10, but Doubley beat him on his second jump in the finals.

Kimombwa, in a close race with Illinois' Craig Virgin for the first two-thirds of the 10,000 meters, pulled away in the final laps to win by almost 100 meters in a clocking of 28:10.27 to eclipse the 28:22.6

Doubley, 6-foot-8, described himself as the "tallest long jumper in the world.

He said, "I wanted 27 feet because a couple of our shot putters said they would kick me if I didn't. Ehizuelen scares me. But I objected to his predictions about what he would do.

Ehizuelen declared the officials were "just a little too much. I just didn't get a good jump." He was called twice for fouls and he said on both of them he was over 27 feet.

Wayne Davidson's Orphaned Wind, still searching for his first 1977 win, defeated Amadevil once last year.

The Black Mountain colt was third just a neck behind No Big Deal and six behind Amadevil - in the Good Neighbor. He was second in his initial two Ak-Sar-Ben chases.

Orphaned Wind will be ridden by usual rider Bruce Brown.

L. P. Bradvik's Emersonian, with two wins at Ak, is also a threat if Amadevil experiences trouble

The Disguised gelding defeated Orphaned Wind by 11/2-lengths in a 51/2furlong allowance test on May 14. He will be ridden by David Pettinger

Atlanta (AP) - An investigating team CDT, Saturday, and much of the club's at- steel roof, investigators said. has concluded that a short circuit in an electrical cord for a fountain pump caused the Beverly Hills Supper Club fire in Kentucky that killed at least 161 persons, The Associated Press learned Friday.

The private investigating team from Atlanta told Kentucky fire officials Thursday night that last Saturday's fire began in a wall by a decorative stone fountain just outside the Southgate, Ky., club's Zebra Room.

The team of three investigators estic was ablaze by the time an alarm for the fire was placed at 8:02 p.m.

A wedding reception was moved out of the Zebra Room before 7:20 because of heat generated by the fire inside a heavily plastered wall, the team reported.

The team was allowed into the scene after Kentucky state investigators and out-of-state experts spent Wednesday and Thursday trying to track down the cause.

The wedding reception was moved because the Zebra Room became too warm. The occupants thought the air conditioning had failed, the team reported.

By Sidney Omarr

Saturday, June 4, 1977

"You asked what sign we would want to be, other than our own. My favorite sign is Libra. These are thoughtful, beautiful people. Libra persons never make hateful, caustic remarks, which you cannot say for Gemini or Virgo. Librans have more backbone than Cancer and are not as wishy-washy as Pisces. The Libra is more outgoing than Taurus, which is my sign. My mom is a Libra and I love her. My father is a Sagittarian and he isn't too bad, either. But if I had my choice, I would pick Libra as my favorite sign. What do you think of that, Mr. Omarr?"

If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Legislature's spending decisions will boost budget 11%

State government's operational budget for fiscal 1977-78, including state aid programs, will be approximately 11% higher than the current

The Legislature's final day decision to approve a $20 million hike in school aid over Gov. J. James Exon's objections raised what had been about a 61/2% increase in spending to the 11%

The result is likely to be a boost in the state sales tax rate from 3% to 3½% effective July 1 to fund the spending increase. No adjustment in the current 17% personal income tax rate is considered likely as a result of legislative spending.

Operational budget recommendations which emerged from the Unicameral's Appropriations Committee were not that different in total from through the Department of Education. those constructed by the governor.

The big increases were added on the floor of the Legislature in the form of school aid and increased maximum payments for aid to dependent

The largest other floor increase, a million dollar funding allotment for alcoholism treatment. will be offset by a corresponding hike in beer and liquor taxes.

After three straight years in which its budget leaped by more than 20%, the state's largest consumer of general fund money, the University of Nebraska, had to settle for a budget hike of about

Other major state agencies were also held well below double digit figures - except for the fact that the school aid increase is budgeted

Two-thirds of the total budget increase came in the form of two state aid programs.

In addition to the $20 million boost in school aid, replacement funding funneled to local government to offset tax relief for farm and business property was increased by $13 million.

That $33 million in increased state payments to local governmental units is 67% of the estimated $49.2 million in increased tax support for state government operations in the coming fiscal

In rough terms, still subject to final adjustment, the Legislature agreed to about $495.5 million in operational expenditures (including state aid programs) compared to about $446.3 million for fiscal 1976-77.

The $446.3 million figure includes about $7.6 million in deficiency appropriations added to the 1976-77 budget by the 1977 Legislature.

Thus, total spending approved by the 1977 session actually exceeded $500 million. What should be included as "deficiency" appropriations is subject to interpretation.

The $7.6 million figure includes $2.8 million in specific deficiency appropriation bills plus $2.5 million to meet earlier school aid obligations and $1.7 million to make reimbursements for an old unconstitutional property tax mill levy for technical community colleges.

Whether funding for those past obligations should be considered as part of the current or coming year's budget is an open question. If they are figured in with the budget for fiscal 1977-78, state government's operational budget increase would be closer to 13% than 11%.

The university, usually the subject of a major budget brawl, received a general fund appropriation of about $101 million compared to $94.6

million for the current year.

Campus comparisons are difficult because of some changes in budget programs from the current fiscal year. Each year, different amounts of campus funds are funneled through the central system budget.

This year's allotments (general fund only) include $46.2 million to the Lincoln campuses, $24.2 million to the Medical Center at Omaha and $9.9 million to the University of Nebraska at Omaha. Another $20.6 million is funneled into or through the central systems budget.

Tucson, Ariz. (UPI) — The Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Tucson has started charging a deposit for the paper cartons used to carry its soft drinks.

Would allowing solicitation by funeral home salesmen and advertising of prices increase total funeral costs and cause unprincipled activities or would the changes bring more light to the public?

Magician Paul Morin, 12, practices a sleight of hand trick.

"If you liked my show, my name is Paul Morin; if you didn't, my name is mud," the young tuxedoed magician says to his imaginary audience at the end of his rehearsed routine.

You can catch his act and judge for vourself Saturday morning at 11:30 on the Show Wagon set up in downtown Lincoln for the Lincoln Downtown

Prepare to be entertained. Paul pulls silk scarves out of an empty pan as easily as he balanced billiard balls between outspread fingers before making them disappear.

Pattering all the while, the 12-yearold trick-maker tosses balls to his audience . . . but they never land. While the viewer scans the ground in disbelief, Paul pulls the missing ball from behind his knee.

After four years, Paul has decided to go public with his act. After the Lincoln Center show, he'll be performing at the Children's Zoo Birdcage

He already has one show to his credit, a St. Patrick's Day performance for classmates and parishioners at St. Mary's School, where he just finished the sixth grade. It had been a flawless routine - until the last trick. He reached into a box to pull out 50 feet of rope, only to be foiled; the rope was on one end of the box and the hole, on the other. The trick flopped and Paul became a Practice makes for a polished act, believer in the axiom "practice

Close-up tricks or sleight of hand coin stunts are out for now because his habit of knuckle-cracking has left his fingers with "big lumps" and spaces that let the coins show through. Magic has given Paul a more unusual habit. Instead of twisting pieces of paper or rolling up match covers, he naturally picks up small items and manipulates them until he can make them disappear. This reporter is glad she held on to Soviet citizen's duty is to state government departments.

Union released its longpromised replacement for the 1936 "Stalin constitution" Saturday - a new document that has the personal stamp of Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and says every citizen must serve the

The 9,000-word draft constitution - which needs only the formality of Supreme Soviet approval — covers more than three pages of the Communist party newspaper Pravda. It includes a lengthy list of civil rights for citizens but says they must not be exercised in a way that could harm the interests of society or the state.

Some knowledgeable observers here said the new constitution also may provide a tailor-made opportunity for Brezhnev to take over the presidency of the Soviet Union.

The current president. Nikolai V. Podgorny, was ousted from the Communist party's ruling Politburo May 24 and is expected to lose the presidency soon.

Besides the current posts of president and 15 vice presidents, the constitution would create a new post of first deputy president.

The new constitution also focuses more on the Communist party than did the 1936 document, which gave the party only a 58-word mention.

It includes lavish praise for the party as the "leading and directing force of Soviet society." Although the party has always fully controlled the government, the new constitution's wording makes it appear even more appropriate now that the party leader should also be head of state.

Adoption of this constitution by the Supreme Soviet — the country's highest legislative body — is expected in October on the 60th anniversary of the 1917 Bolshevik revolution.

maiden voyage of the season, plying a 500-mile coastal route from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Goose Bay in Labrador, which is part of Newfoundland province. The passengers and crew abandoned the sinking ship in lifeboats and many were waiting on nearby ice floes when rescue helicopters and the reebreaker Sir Humphrey Gilbert arrived to pick them up. The rescue craft took them to St. John's and St. Anthony, Newfoundland.

Bethesda to become health education center

By Deb Gray Star Staff Writer

The Bethesda Hospital, 4600 Valley Road, has been sold to the Lincoln Area Health Education Center, Dave Burdine, president of the Bethesda Foundation, announced Friday. The Lincoln Area Health Education Center is a nonprofit organization formed in late May. The organization will lease the building to medical and health education programs. Dr. J. W. Upright, executive director of the center, said The Lincoln Medical Education Foundation is one organization that will move into the Bethesda building.

The foundation, a coalition of hospital administrators, physicians and community representatives, was established in 1971 to develop and promote a training program for medical education.

It now sponsors, in cooperation with the University of Nebraska Medical Center, a family practice center at 525 No. 48th St.

Other organizations involved in the foundation are the Lancaster County Medical Society, Bryan Memorial Hospital, Lincoln General Hospital, St. Elizabeth Community Health Center and the Veterans Administration

Upright said other agencies had been contacted about using the Bethesda building but no other arrangements had been finalized.

Upright, also said it would be "awkward" to reveal what the center will pay for the 125bed hospital because financial negotiations have not yet been completed. According to documents filed in the City-

County Planning Department, a major activity at the health center would be a three-year accredited family practice training program. The program would provide training for 15 full-time family medicine residents, including clinic space for the ambulatory care of 90 patients a day, the documents said. The documents stated the center would

Woman alleges discrimination in Plainview school's firing questionable handling of a district-operated

United Press International

A Lincoln woman has filed a $200,000 lawsuit contending she was dismissed from her secretarial position with the Plainview School District No. 5 because of sexual and racial discrimination.

Alice Bigpond Roach, an American Indian, filed the lawsuit in Lincoln's U.S. District Court against the district, its board members and its superintendent.

She said she was dismissed in January, 1975, after working as bookkeeper and secretary to the superintendent for 11 years, including nine years as school board secretary. Mrs. Roach asked that all federal funds earmarked for the district be withheld "pending the district's compliance" with federal and state civil rights laws.

She claimed the school board "used as a pretext" for her dismissal her allegedly.

She said the defendants, including Supt. Joel Wedergren and School Board President Dorothy Hanneman, "deliberately created the impression" that she was "dishonest" in handling funds for the program.

However, Mrs. Roach said, an audit vindicated her.

She also claimed she received no hearing before her dismissal.

Mrs. Roach said in her suit that nearly a year before she was dismissed, Wedergren hired other, non-Indians to do the secretarial and bookkeeping work she had been handling. She said the positions were never advertised.

Mrs. Roach said that because of the embarrassment surrounding her dismissal, she was forced to move to Lincoln and live apart from her husband and family.

Gasohol comments prompt responses By Lynn Zerschling are not forced to accept the Petroleum

Star Staff Writer

An official of the Nebraska Petroleum Council responded Friday to Gov. J. James Exon's statement that oil companies may be misrepresenting his position on the gasohol program.

Charles Chace, executive director of the council, said the petroleum industry's policy on Nebraska's gasohol program has remained unchanged. He said the industry doesn't oppose building a grain alcohol plant if it will relieve the over-supply of farm grains. However, the industry doesn't support "mandating the use of ethanol or the byproducts before the plant is built." House limits Energy Dept. to 5 years

Washington (AP) — The House voted Friday to establish a new department of energy but insisted that the agency should only have a lite of five years unless renewed by Congress.

The energy department bill, slightly trimined from that requested by President Carter, was approved 310 to 20.

Similar legislation has already passed the Senate. Before the bill cango to the President's desk, a House-Senate conference committee must rgconcile differences between the two

Both measures would pull together energy programs now scattered throughout the government and abolish three existing agencies outright.

And both measures resect Carter's proposal that the secretary of the new agency - expected to be White House energy adviser James R. Schlesinger Instead, the House and Senate voted the 1982 cutoff date to vest these powers in a commission to be included in the new department.

Carter has asked Congress to create energy proposals he wants enacted.

On a 202-126 vote, the House approved an amendment by Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., that would kill the new agency on Dec. 31, 1982. This would require further congressional action then if the department is to be con-

Although sponsors of the bill protested it would lead to inefficiency in the new department by creating an atmosphere of uncertainty, Broyhill argued that "Congress does a very good job setting up new agencies but a poor job at reviewing them.

He said if Congress determines that be given broad powers to set prices—the energy department is doing a good. job, then it can vote to extend it beyond

Before approving the bill, the House rejected a proposal to include within the new agency a unit empowered to the new department to carry out the strip large oil companies of their authority to buy foreign oil directly.

> Under the House bill, a five-member commission would regulate prices of natural gas and wholesale rates of electricity transmitted across state lines, responsibilities now vested in the Federal Power Commission.

> The Senate-passed bill would establish a three-member board which. along with natural gas and wholesale electricity rates, would also regulate some oil prices. But the Senate version permits input from the energy secretary and gives the President veto power over the commission's decisions a power not contained in the House bill

This is a key difference that will have to be resolved by the House-Senate conference committee.

The House version also gives Congress the right to veto rules issued by the new department. The Schate bill does not.

After the House vote, Schlesinger said the administration will push for enactment of the Senate version of the bill, which gives the President and the energy secretary more power than the House measure does.

The new agency, the first Cabinet department to be created since the Department of Transportation in 1966, would absorb programs from the FPC, the Federal Energy Administration and the Energy Research and Development Administration, all of which would be abolished,

It would also pick up energy programs from a half dozen other government agencies.

Italian filmmaker dies

Roberto Rossellini, a pioneering giant among Italy's postwar filmmakers who was perhaps best known for his much-publicized romance and marriage to Ingrid Bergman, died Friday of an apparent heart attack. He was 71.

Rossellini, whose off-carnera love affairs often overshadowed his much-honored moviemaking, had devoted his recent years to television and lecturing.

He was regarded as a founder of the neorealism film movement that used documented living conditions as a setting for fiction and set a popular trend following World War II.

Nation's economy healthier

economic health improved in May, when un- nual rate of 6.5%. employment dipped to 6.9% and inflation eased substantially in the wholesale market, the Labor Department reported Friday.

Wholesale prices rose a moderate 0.4%, ending a strong three-month inflationary surge caused by escalating farm and food prices. Coffee and other farm prices fell in May for the first time in six months.

Unemployment dipped below 7% for the first time since the early days of the recession 30 months ago, although the actual drop was in-

"I think the trends are very good," said Julius Shiskin, chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. 'I'd say our recovery is as good or hetter as the recovery we experienced in 1967-

Administration economists interpreted May's 2.3% decline in farm prices — the first in six months — as a first sign that grocery prices will be easing in the next few months. Wholesale trends affect retail markets.

"It certainly is a break in the trend," remarked a government economist. "But it deesn't mean consumers can expect lower grocery store prices just vet.

President Carter's economic advisers have predicted that inflation will continue at an accelerated rate in the retail markets through.

The tiny wholesale price rise in May compared to big jumps averaging 1% in each of the previous three months. May also brought moderate increases of 0.4% for industrial goods and 1.8% for processed foods.

Farm price declines offset increases for fuel and power. Raw coffee prices, which have nearly tripled in the past year, suddenly dropped in May along with grains, eggs, cocoa beans, tea, soybeans, poultry and vegetables. The wholesale price index was 195.2 in May, up 7.3% over the past year. This means that goods costing $100 in 1967 now cost $195.20 or nearly double over the past decade.

Unemployment fell from 7% in April to the lowest level since November 1974. But the actual number of jobless Americans remained virtually unchanged from the April level of 6.75

Carter's advisers warn that joblessness may not decline much more this year. Some economists even foresee a small temporary increase during the summer months.

Total employment rose for the seventh consecutive month in May, climbing 400,000 to 90.4 million. The proportion of Americans in the labor market rose to a record 62.2%.

Factory hiring increased 65,000 in May. Joblessness rose to 5.3% for men, and declined to 6.6% for women.

Washington (AP) - The United States and Cuba moved Friday to end 16 years of official hostility by swapping diplomatic teams that will take up problems standing in the way of full restoration of relations.

At the same time, the Marxist government of President Fidel Castro said it would release 10 of the 30 Americans known to be in Cuban prisons and would review the cases of those remaining in jail. The names of those released, all being held on drug charges, were withheld until their families were notified.

The State Department called the announcement a goodwill gesture but said it "was not part of the deal" to establish diplomatic interest sections."

The decision to accept Cuban diplomats represents a major shift in policy toward Havana. The announcement was made at the same State Department podium where for years the Castro regime was regularly accused of stirring up subversion in the western

We may throw out baby with the bath water

In some respects it was a curious article on water conservation by William Safire of the New York Times that appeared on this page yesterday. It concerned the drought in northern California and what the future holds by way of enlightened water conservation.

Part of Safire's reasoning contained some validity — that our promotion of water usage in irrigation is contributing to the current water shortage. That is true in all aspects of our life. As a nation, we have treated water as a cheap and inexhaustible resource when, in fact, it is

But in our haste now to rectify this error, we often seem to be running in all directions at once. Safire, for instance, noted that in California "part of the problem is the weather: The sun keeps shining. This is the second year of the drought, of exposed cracked-earth bottoms where reservoirs used to sparkle, and Californians are getting edgy."

One might conclude from the statement that a dry reservoir is, therefore, a problem. If so, a full reservoir is something else. An asset, perhaps?

But then, Safire goes on to suggest that perhaps our building of such things as reservoirs is a mistake because it breeds a consumption of water that gives us a shortage problem in times of inadequate rainfall. But is that an accurate

Reservoirs came into popularity as conservation measures and we see nothing yet that has destroyed that premise. The point to remember in considering reservoirs or dams is that they contain water that would otherwise be

Without a reservoir, the water would flow on down the stream and eventually reach the ocean, where it becomes salty and unfit for human use. Certainly, reservoirs can have an adverse effect upon underground water supplies downstream but not if they are properly managed

Also true is the fact that reservoir construction can adversely disrupt the environment of the stream itself of which they become a part and of the surrounding stream drainage area. But that is a distinct consideration in each and every water storage proposal or project, not an inherent fact of every reservoir.

Our purpose here is not to promote the cause of each and every big dam project now in existence or on the drawing boards, but rather, to urge a word of caution in our water planning for the future. One of the biggest mistakes we could make would be to pronounce a wholesale death sentence on all future reservoirs.

A reservoir stores otherwise lost water for productive use at a later date. That ought to continue to be an integral part of our future water conservation plans

Not reservoirs done thoughtlessly, but stream storage where conditions dictate the sensibility of it from all environmental points of view. It is simply bad and faulty logic to say that since we now have problems in California with dry reservoirs, we can solve the problem in the future by not building any more reservoirs.

That's akin to saying that if we needed no water, we would have no problem. The fact is that without any reservoirs at all, northern California would still be having severe water problems.

A further fact is that, without the reservoirs, the problem in California would have come a lot sooner than it did and would then and now be far more severe than it is.

We need co-ordination of water storage dams with our environment and we need better co-ordination of all methods of irrigation with natural and man-made water supplies but it makes no sense at all to suddenly throw out all the conservation practices of the past because we have frequently let demand outstrip supply. Let us intelligently eliminate those practices that now are shown to be wrong and that utilization which has made the wisdom of the past

London - Amid the pomp and circumstance that only the British seem able to muster, even in these straitened times. Queen Elizabeth II is being acclaimed in a year-long Silver Jubilee. Hundreds of bonfires will be lit all over the country on the night of June 6 to commemorate the 25th anniversary of her reign. Elizabeth's jubilee has stirred the deep tribal loyalties of this island people. Writing in The Times of London, Philip Howard spoke for many when he suggested that this "is a good opportunity to stop and congratulate ourselves on how well, at least, the monarchy had adapted itself, and how well it is still working as the supreme unifying and validating symbol of the nation.

Elizabeth's powers are symbolic rather than substantive, but no less real for all that. The sovereign's role in day-to-day political affairs was defined by Walter Bagehot more than a century ago as the right "to be consulted, to encourage and to warn." that "We are fortunate that, in Queen Elizabeth, (the throne) is . . . in the hands of someone for whom the nation feels genuine affection and admiration." The monarchy, as an institution, may have its critics, but the Queen personally has almost none. As The Observer pointed out, the Royal Family is expected to embody Christian values and to provide an example of a happy and stable family life. Such a model means a great deal to the British people, even if many of them are unable to pattern their own lives after it.

Moreover, Elizabeth does not intend to pardon prisoners or reduce railway fares for children. Instead, a writer to The Times mischievously suggested, she might consider granting an amnesty on overdue library books or declaring a moratorium on parking fines.

All in all, a mood of solemn pride prevails. Most Britons would agree with news commentator Brain Connell, who asserted that the nation has a monarch "complete in herself, wise and experienced in our ways and constitutional processes, a woman of honesty and humility, with a strong sense of duty and a firm conviction that what she is doing is thoroughly worthwhile.

Praise for hospitals

A nod to Bryan

Lincoln, Neb. I was delivered by ambulance, semi-conscious, to will find himself treated as Bryan Memorial Hospital in much like a prince as a patient. May, and have just come home after 30 days.

There are no words to express my deep appreciation. Top priority item for the nurses, the angels in white, and their constant thoughtful care. The doctors came quietly, explained. leaving me content. The X-ray technicians, everyone, all were considerate and I thank each

The food was delicious, even the broth and soup, my first meals. Solid foods, attractively prepared, were tasty and I have seldom tasted such tender steaks. Thanks to the cooks.

The beds, spotlessly white, were for easy sleeping, resting or watching TV.

A May 28 letter spoke only of complaints. That is sad. Hospitals are life-savers.

A nod to St. E.'s

Lincoln, Neb I have been muttering and mumbling now for several days about the article by Associated Press Writer C. C. Miniclier on Page 14 of The Star for May 25. He was unhappy with his hospital care.

Since he is a trained journalist, could it be that his professional eve fell only on the unusual, the exceptions that justify the "man-bitesdog" dictum of reporters? Incase he was trying to write in a popular vein, however, he succeeded only in coming up with a tasteless article since he makes it appear that hospitals are uncaring and poorly operated

He should have tried our own. St. Elizabeth Community Health Center, There, sir, is a hospital whose staff shows real concern for patients 1 should know, I have been there as a patient several times. The tares or staff members in whose charge I was quickly Caso to mind - there were many. few old-timers and young scholars being part of that "Western celebrated the plan in Churchill's Civilization" and offered to include the words, as the most generous act of the states of that region in its bounty.

All this sounds remote and even vaguely romantic today, until you look at the revival and muddle of nationalism in Europe and elsewhere in the world. The European states have 'recovered' but not reformed all that much. They have made some progress, but they have regained their "independence" and don't quite know what to do with it in an increasingly mixed-up and interdependent world.

It is interesting to recall one issue that troubled the founders of the Marshall Plan in Washington months before Marshall went to Harvard. The issue was not whether Washington should help Europe recover from the destruction of the war, but whether it should insist on the political reform and unification of Europe as a condition of massive aid, revive it first and hope for political reform later.

William McChesney Martin, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, argued for political reform first. If the European states were restored before they committed themselves to reform and some kind of political unity, they would never reform. In an analogy for which the Europeans never quite forgave him, he said it was the old problem of handling a drunk. If you restored him before he reformed himself, he would go back to the United States, could find common ways to defend a free and common Martin's view was rejected, but the civilization. Washington even thought U.S. objective of European unity as the in those days of Eastern Europe as purpose of the Marshall Plan is clear the facts in his "Lessons of the Marshall Plan Experience" here in Paris this week The critical element in my view," from the record. Lord Franks recalled

he said, "was an idea, the idea of unity in Europe, in Western Europe, once Eastern Europe had withdrawn. It was alive in American thinking. It was in the mind of George Kennan as he drafted the report of the policy planning staff for General Marshall: the insistence on a joint program initiated by Europeans, so that they begin to think like Europeans and move towards a larger less-tragmented market." Lord Franks also recalled that the idea of European unity was alive in the report of the Committee of European Economic Co-operation, which responded to Marshall's offer of aid. The report stated that "the controlling principle of the committee's work has been the interdependence of the national economies of the countries concerned and, if these countries are to proceed, quickly along the road to recovery, they must proceed logether.

It is clear that the dreams of 30 years ago have not been realized, that the plan worked so well and restored so much of the old that Europe rejected the dream and America has now almost forgotten it. Yet, despite French insistence on national independence and British tardiness in joining the community, there is still much worth celebrating after 30 years, for the idea of practical co-operation among the nations remains, and the link between Europe and North America has not been broken.

"Western Europe, the European Economic Community." Lord Franks insisted, "is still dependent upon the United States for its security, and its prosperity is still linked to that of the United States. Many of the younger generation do not wish to accept this as

"Too young to remember the Marshall Plan, their minds are colored by memories of the war in Vietnam and of Watergate. They do not trust America or American foreign policy, but these abberations are only part of

As in 1947, so in 1977, it is the common interest of the United States and Western Europe that the concern and involvement of the United States in Western Europe and the European Economic Community should continue.

In general, this principle of cooperation seems to be accepted in this part of the world - particularly the American security and economic side of the bargain, but the notion of European unity, the original American objective of the Marshall Plan, while not wholly lost, seems to recede from the European mind.

Even Jean Monnet, a Nobel Peace Prize candidate if there ever was one and the last of the optimistic architects of European unity, watches with regret in his 80's the stubborn power of nationalism and its refusal to recognize the imperative demands of an increasingly new co-operative world order.

Even so, the Marshall Plan was a step worth celebrating, and the odd thing is that the political leaders of Europe, so preoccupied by the anxieties and complexities of national politics and economics, paid so little attention to the anniversary.

CIA slowly relinquishing press meddling

Washington - Slowly and painfully, the truth comes out.

Back in 1973 we first learned that the CIA used journalists as agents and news organizations as covers. The disclosure came from William Colby, then CIA director, who also said that he would cut back his agency's involvement with the press.

Since then there have been a series of similar revelations and promises of change. Details were different each time, but it was abundantly clear that the CIA was using the press and hated to give it up. As to specifies - the names of journalists who served the agency and news organizations that cooperated - the agency resolutely stonewalled. And the news business, usually so resourceful in digging out secrets, contented itself with pompous resolutions and expressions of dismay.

The other day, however, a tiny piece of the puzzle dropped into place. Richard S. Salant, president of CBS News, disclosed that in the 1950's and early 1960's the network worked closely with the CIA. It let agents monitor films and correspondents' reports that were not used on the air. Foreign correspondents who came home for year-. end broadcasts were debriefed by Allen Dulles, CIA boss at the time, Salant also indicated that at least two of the network's employes worked closely with the agency - just how closely is not clear As a customary in such matters, Charles B. Seib

there is confusion over the extent and circumstances of the CIA-CBS cooperation. Sig Mickelson, who headed CBS News in the 1956's, said that it was a matter of "sharing information" and that it was done at the implied direction of CBS Board Chairman William S. Paley. A spokesman for Paley says. that Paley doesn't remember it that

Both Mickelson and Salant, who says he ended the arrangement, have defended it as a by-product of the cold war. But the CIA's involvement with the news media was not just a cold war phenomenon. It continued into the very recent past. We cannot be entirely sure that it isn't continuing now, abroad if

There is still much to be learned. Other pieces of the puzzle will fall into place, one by one, and eventually we may get a picture of what went on and who was involved.

But what about the present? The best source these days is Sen. Damel Induye. (D-Hawaii), whose Senate Intelligence Committee appears to be trying to give CIA the close congressional oversight that has been lacking for so many

Inouye recently assured members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors that the CIA finally has stopped using American journalists. That year ago. Nevertheless, assuming reasons. there are no hidden gimmicks, it is welcome news

Inouve's report on CIA involvement in foreign journalism was less heartening. He said that he hoped someday he would be able to say that no members of the press, foreign or domestic, were involved in U.S. intelligence activities, "but I am sorry I cannot do so this afternoon.

He did report, however, that "certain covert activities involving foreign press" have been ended and that he favored a flat prohibition against such activities. He also indicated that a majority of committee members acreed with him, which raises the strong possibility that Congress will act to end all CIA press involvement. foreign and domestic.

If that happens, and if Congress can make it stick, an embarrassing double standard that has been tolerated by the American news business will end.

While nearly all American journalists would agree that espionage and U.S. journalism should not be mixed, they have been much less disturbed by CIA meddling with foreign media. At the same time, the CIA, while surrendering - ever so slowly - its involvement with the American media, has insisted that it must retain the opfrom of manipulating the press abroad. Now it appears that the agency is merely means that the agency is about to be forced to surrender that ophonoring a pledge it made more than a tion. This is good news for several

> First, as long as the CIA feels free to tamper with the foreign press, there is the danger that material it plants will return to this country in dispatches by correspondents unaware that they are peddling tainted merchandise.

> Second, the CIA involvement with the media here and abroad has hampered American efforts to fight an international movement toward government control of news by making it difficult to refute charges that the American press itself is a tool of government.

There is a third reason for welcoming an end to CIA press involvement that is less selfish, nationally and professionally. In the end it is the most persuasive reason of all:

President Carter has declared America's commitment to human rights. Surely among those rights are political and social freedom. And surely such freedoms can exist only in societies of informed people - that is, societies with a free, uncorrupted

So for Americans to profess a belief in human rights and yet tolerate the corruption of the press of other countries by an agency of the U.S. government could be seen, around the world, only as the grossest hypocrisy. And that is what it would be.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psaims 2 and Acts 4:25

4DVERTISEMENT

In the 18th and following chapters of the Gospel of St John there is the record of Christ's arrest and followed by His trial crucifizion, burial and resurrection. The previous 17th chapter gives His prayer to His Heavenly Father. At the beginning of it He says God has given Him power over all flesh to give out Elemal Life AND THIS IS ETERNAL LIFE THAT THEY MIGHT KNOW THEE THE ONLY TRUE GOD AND JESUS CHRIST WHOM THOU HAST SENT

TO KNOW GOD IS ETERNAL LIFE. The first recorded words spoken by Jesus Christ after His baptism by John Baptist were MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE BUT BY EVERY WORD THAT PROCEEDETH OUT OF THE MOUTH OF GOD Matthew and Luke 4.4

Adam was 930 years old when he died. Noah, the fenth from Adam was 950 when he died. All the men in between them lived to be over 900 except two one of whom died rather early and only to be 777. However, one of these men by passed the grave and never did die. His name was Enoch He got to walking with God, and after a sojourn of only 355 years on this earth he and The Almighty walked off into Eternity where he is still looing strong in. The land where we never grow old. The man who lived to be the oldest of those recorded was the son of Enech who died at 969. The next oldest who made it to 952 was the father of Enoch

The following quote gives us some information as to the

The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and behold it was corrupt for all flesh had corrupted His way upon the earth. And God said unto Noah. The end of all flesh is come before me, for the earth is filled with violence through them and behold I will destroy them with the earth Gen 611-13

Look to yourselves! Search The Scriptures, and consider the yows you took in joining The Church. Pay your yows unto God. He has no pleasure in fools. A heather is one who does not believe in The God of The Bible. Why does he rage? Because he does not like God and His ways of righteousness and holiness. In a generation that corrupts the ways of God on the earth there are none who feel need of and appreciates the work of the risen and living Christ in their hearts more than such as wit themselves to literally obey God's MoralLaw His Ten Commandments To fear The Lord and obey His Commandments is. The whole duty of man Are you striving to do your duty?

cause why God destroyed men in the days of Noah As God looks upon the 20th Century earth does He see any corruption and violence?

Municipal power pool expects excess in '80s

The Nebraska Municipal Power Pool could wind up with excess power to sell to member cities or other utilities during the early 1980s.

The organization's board of directors was told Thursday that Lincoln, Grand Island and Hastings expect to have varying amounts of excess power to market then.

The Grand Island representative indicated a 100megawatt power plant is planned for that city; a Hastings spokesman said that city's plant size is still undeternuned, though the smallest would be 54 megawatts.

Spelunking popularity reaching new highs

By Steven Prokesch United Press International

Time stands still in caves. There is no day or night. There ate no seasons

A rock climber and hiker but claustrophobic, I had avoided caving - or spelunking as it is popuarly known - until a friend assured me that it was an activity every outdoors enthusiast should try - at least once.

'But bring a change of clothes,' he said.

Equipped with climbing ropes and miners' helmets with carbide lamps, we descended into Lemon Hole near Derry, Pal, a cave formed by natural faults and enlarged by streams. While I enjoyed the intriguing formations, the mud, darkness and sense of confinement equaled my fearful expec-My guide, George Bauroth, 47, a professor at St. Vincent's College in nearby Latrobe, Pa., assured me the bats sleeping on the walls were harmless. 'Hardly any American bats carry rables," he said. We spent more than three hours in the bowels of the earth, crawling through mud-coated dank passages too small to turn Spelunking is but one of the outdoors activities that has become increasingly popular during the last 10 years. Backpacking and hiking have enjoyed the sharpest rise.

But other more demanding sports, such as rock climbing, have also attracted large numbers. The U.S. Forest Service says between 1960 and 1965, outdoor recreation visits increased from 4.2 billion to 6.5 billion and are expected to increase to about 16.8 billion by the year Groups such as the Sierra Club and the Appalachian Mountain Club, report record surges in membership during the past "I have seen estimates that the number of people backpacking has increased by 600 per cent since the 1950s, said Jim Watters, 49, chairman of the Sierra Club's Knapsack College outing clubs also report increases in membership.

Many colleges that previously offered no outdoors program have found it necessary to start one to attract applicants. The program at Hampshire College in Amherst, Mass., is one of the best and has produced some of the most respected current climbers in America. "Yes, a large number of people are attracted to Hampshire because of the outdoors curriculum," agreed Dave

Roberts, the head of the program, While some feel climbing hiking and spelunking have reached a peak in popularity, others see them as sports here to

What's this man doing? He's one of a growing number of spelunking fans. "It isn't necessarily fadism," said Roberts, 33, who is also an accomplished Alaskan climber. "I think the popularity will accelerate. Many now see climbing as an alternative to traditional sports such as football.

Who are these people that tromp up mountains with burdensome packs, that climb vertical cliffs or descend hundreds of feet into the ground? What are they searching for? Are they masochists?

"A lot of them are under 30," said Watters of the Sierra Club, who is also a Wells Fargo Bank official. "A lot of youngsters - and older people, too - are looking for something. They want to get away from the values of urban life and return to nature.

"It answers some kind of call to get away for awhile to cope with the natural order of things.

Brad Schneider of the Mohonk Trust said in comparison with backpacking, the surge in climbing has generally been restricted to college students. The Mohonk Trust owns and operates the Schwangunks in New York, one of the most popular climbing spots in the United States. "Climbing is almost exclusively a collegiate sport,"

Schneider said. "Most seem to stick with it for an average of two years and give it up after college. The actual number of climbers over 30 years of age has remained static. "Most climbers come from the middle or upper classes,"

While Roberts, who himself belonged to the Harvard Mountaineering Club, agreed with Schneider, he said that blue-collar workers and college dropouts also figure among

Pacers meet payroll with donations

Indianapolis (UPI) - The Indiana Pacers temporarily put their financial problems behind them Friday by meeting a $100,000 payroll.

The National Basketball Association franchise also announced plans for a season ticket drive beginning Mon-

Officials said the $100,000 came from a fund drive started at mid-week by John Jewett, president of Market Square Associates, MSA is a group that runs the sports arena where the Pacers and the Indianapolis Racers of the World Hockey Association play their home games.

Jewett solicited the funds mainly from local businessmen, but the team spokesman said fans also contributed money.

All-league forward Billy Knight and center Dave Robisch each filed actions against the Pacers late Thursday for their pay. The moves were the start of a procedure which could have made seven of the eight players free agents. The other, Darnell Hillman, now is with the New York Nets.

NBA rules allow five days after a team defaults on the financial arrangements of player contracts for the franchise to meet the money obligations. After the five-day period, a player can negotiate with any league

Doubley leaped 26-feet, 11 3/4-inches to erase the 26-11 record set in 1975 by Friday's runnerup, Charlton Ehizuelen of Illinois. Ehizuelen was the leader heading into the final round with 26-10, but Doubley beat him on his second jump in the finals.

Kimombwa, in a close race with Illinois' Craig Virgin for the first two-thirds of the 10,000 meters. pulled away in the final laps to win by almost 100 meters in a clocking of 28:10.27 to eclipse the 28:22.6

Two NCAA track meet records fall record set a year ago by Washington State's John Ngeno. Virgin finished second and also broke the previous record with 28:22.48.

Doubley, 6-foot-8, described himself as the "tallest long jumper in the world."

He said, "I wanted 27 feet because a couple of our shot putters said they would kick me if I didn't. Ehizuelen scares me. But I objected to his predictions about what he would do."

Ehizuelen declared the officials were "just a little too much. I just didn't get a good jump." He was called twice for fouls and he said on both of them he was over 27 feet.

Omaha - If you want to see what may he the finest Nebraska-bred ever, you should attend Saturday's races here at Ak-Sar-Ben.

That's when Amadevil, the 3-year-old pride of the Kemling Brothers, Inc. of Aurora, should have an easy time with six focs in the $25,000-added Breeders' Sprint Stakes

In his two-year career, Amadevil has carned $128,587, including $60,784 as a 2vear-old This season, the Jungle Savage gelding

At Ak-Sar-Ben, he's captured two of three races — the $15,000 Inaugural Purse on May 3 and the $24,650 Good Neighbor Stakes on May 20.

He was unchallenged in either Omaha test. He scored a nine-length win in the Inaugural and raced to a 6-length triumph in the Good Neighbor

Three of the six foes in Saturday's 6furlong chase saw nothing but Amadevil's tail in that event.

That's why Amadevil, breaking from the first position under regular rider Rob Williams, appears an overwhelming choice in the Breeders' Sprint Stakes. Still there are several runners capable of springing the upset if Amadevil

Weird, weird humor built success

Hundreds of Lincolnites have found, when in need of a chuckle, to look no further than the classifieds, where the Weird Wally's Used Car advertisements are found. Likewise, hundreds of car buyers — more than 960 since July 1975 — have kept a smile on the face of Rex Wally Smith, owner of "the little lot that sells a Business for Smith is booming. He recently finished his best month ever, 92 cars sold, and in May he moved to more spacious quarters at 2323 P St. His inventory has leaped from a humble beginning of four cars to more than 110. What once was a hobby now is an 35 to 100-hour-per-week obsession.

And he's loving it. All this he attributes to honest dealing, hard work, and - oh, yes -- that crazy advertising cam-

"The advertising has been practically the whole thing, said Smith, who decided not to label his business with his first name - Rex - "because it sounds like you're saving 'wrecks.

Judging from his newspaper and radio spots, it often sounds as if wrecks are exactly what he's selimg

"Ell Cheapos" heads a long list of sub-$500 cars. While many are "clean" or "nice", others are merely "ok," "high milers," "roilers" or "rough."

not make it" to the new lot-'Tis four blocks away you know. But we're so confident that they will make it, they're guaranteed You hav it at 20th & P. we guarantee it to 24th & P.

Most of his ads are laced with humor, which Smith is the first to admit "gets so stupid it's ob-stactimes. A 73 Pontrac, for example, was touted as a "nice car, but what a color. I think I've seen this color in a diaper

Referring to his P St. location, Smith sometimes makes the gas-saving claim that his cars "run on P."

But most of his humor is not so tacky.
"Welcome Lookers," beckoned a recent ad-

"Especially good lookers."

'We lose about $10 on every car," one ad explained, "but we make it up on volume."

He frequently has special sales - Junk Sales, '69 Sale, Volume Sale, Nice Old Car Sale. And once, after a small corner of his sign was burned from an electrical short, he advertised a "Fire and Water Damage Sale.

We wanted a flood sale, but didn't know how to start one," the ad read. Featured was a $500 '72 Vega, described as "OK. We wanted to let this one burn, but the fireman said no

Downgrading one's product may not sound like good business sense, but it works, Smith says.

Some people come in and say they really cracked up." Smith said, "Others say it's really dumb and they can't stand it. But while they're saying that, they're signing an invoice and giving me-

"People generally know what or who Weird Wal-

But they sometimes fail to realize that not all Wally's autos are "bones," "tired fron," and "rough old toads." Smith said.

In fact, only 30 of his fleet are priced in the under $500 range, he said. These are cars the buyer knows are going to have a few bugs - and Smith always explains exactly what those ailments are.

"I call 'em as I see 'em," said Smith. "I don't try to point a picture of a car as a '64 model car, sharp, loaded with equipment and selling for $100. It's got some problems if it's $100, but it's got some service

"Every once in a while, people will come in and be real surprised we have some nice, sharp '71s, '72s, and '73s' Smith said.

Smith's humor doesn't stop with his ads. Several cars on the lot are graced with tongue-in-cheek signs

"German Warfare," describes a Volkswagen, though it doesn't appear to be that much of a bomb. "Not to be thrown," is the rule regarding a Javelin. On the walls of his new air-conditioned office are pictures of the 36-year-old Smith making faces. "I like to put a little humor into this business that's too much of a hustle-bustle thing," he said. He also likes to put almost every waking hour into his lot. "To me, it's not really work," said Smith, a lifelong Lincolnite. "It's m' THING."

Love for cars apparently runs in Smith's blood. 'In our family, if you're not a mechanic, you're a car dealer." Three uncles run used car lots, and his father sold guns, coins and cars for 30 years in Lincoln before his death in 1965.

A few years ago, Smith started making a habit of buying an older car, fixing it up, and "selling it for no more than I had (invested) in it.

"Finally, it got to the point in May of '75 when the state came along and said, Wally, no more of this curbstoning cars.' "He had to get a license, or quit. Two months later, he opened his first lot, with a four-car fleet. That's when the real fun — dealing —

"It's nice when a person pays you the sticker price, but I like a person who likes to dicker a little about it, Smith said.

You get to going back and forth, and when you get within a hundred dollars of each other, you know that man is going to own the car. And it's almost an ego trip for the person to know he got that car dealer down a little bit."

But that doesn't mean you're going to get Weird Wally to sell you one of his lamed $100 wonder machines for half price.

"If I've got an old tub for $100, there's not much I can do about the price of that."

Regrets strain family

DEAR JOANNE FARRIS: Most of us are in sympathy with the elderly, but doesn't it seem some oldsters feel it is their prerogative because of age to be unreasonable, inconsiderate, and exempted from any blame for wrongs they must have done to those who cared about them?

Doniphan (UPI) -- Doniphan residents will hold an auction Sunday to help pay off the cost of a bitterly tought battle with Grand Island and Hastings over putting a power plant near Doniphan. Domphan Mayor Robert "Jody" Labrie said about

$1,500 to $1,700 in expenses still must be paid. The battle cost Doniphan about $60,000 and the landowners in-Labrie said the auction at 1 p.m. Sunday is aimed at paying off the debt without assessing the approximately 600 local residents with some sort of tax. Items for the sale have come in from all over the state, Labrie said, adding he was somewhat surprised at the statewide support the town received. "I would say we were quite surprised . . . at the support from larger cities. It was pretty much in favor of us statewide," Labrie said.

said emotions are mixed in Doniphan toward Grand Island and Hastings, but the mayor said "we would only wish that they had come to us with a little more open idea about where they were going to put their plant and this never would have happened. Grand Island and Hastings last year proposed a joint 150-megawatt, $100 million power plant to serve the two communities and to be located about one mile

The two cities, working jointly through the Great Plants Power Agency, abandoned the idea after state Power Review Board denied a permit to build the plant. The board said the plant would not be economically

Since then, Grand Island has decided to build a 100negawatt unit at a cost of $80 million and Hastings has decided to construct a 54-megawatt facility which will cost up to $75 million.
